

To Soar Along

Approaching the eve of college graduation. Mind full of thoughts yet to be realized, grand imaginations.

This university has given me my wings. Now the campus, its brick buildings fade away. I will carry lessons learned here with me everyday.

When I look out the window of the cockpit
And see the big world below
my heart will know,
the people there have shown me where to go.

Friends, classmates, professors have guided me this far,
and will continue to guide me as I soar under our star.

I need never worry
when stepping into the sky,
for UMES
has taught me to fly.
